AMENDING THE INDIAN SELF-DETERMINATION AND EDUCATION ASSISTANCE ACT TO PROVIDE FURTHER SELF-GOVERNANCE BY INDIAN TRIBES

NOVEMBER 16, 2004.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Indians Affairs, submitted the following

R E P O R T

[To accompany S. 1696]

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1696) to amend the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act to provide further self-governance by Indian tribes, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment in the nature of a substitute and recommends that the bill, as amended, do pass.

PURPOSE

The purpose of S. 1696, the “Department of Health and Human Services Tribal Self-Governance Amendments Act of 2003” is to amend the Act to provide further self-governance for Indian tribes by authorizing a 5-year demonstration project for various programs within the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS), and for other purposes.

BACKGROUND

A. Evolution of Tribal Self-Governance

In 1970, President Nixon delivered his now-famous “Special Message to Congress on Indian Affairs” which laid the foundation for a change in Federal Indian policy from termination and assimilation to Indian self-determination. The Act, originally enacted in 1975, is an outgrowth of this policy and continues to be one of the pillars of Federal Indian policy.

Prior to that time, the Federal government administered various programs for the benefit of Indian people, with the design and administration of these programs set by the Federal agencies, not the tribal governments. The Act authorized a shift from such Federal domination to tribal control of these programs.

In the Act Congress authorized Indian tribes to assume, through contractual arrangements, operation of Indian programs and services operated by the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) and Indian Health Service (IHS). However, in the 10 years following enactment, Indian tribes indicated that they faced significant resistance particularly from the IHS in seeking “new health services, providing services differently than previously provided by the IHS, or shifting funds within a contract.” GAO Report No. GAO/HRD-86-99, “Indian Health Service Contracting for Health Services Under the Indian Self-Determination Act”, September, 1986, at 4.

Likewise, Congress “observed in 1988 [that its] goal of shifting resources to tribal operation ha[d] been frustrated by the enormous growth in the governments contract monitoring and contract administration bureaucracy.” S. Rpt. 102-444, at 16.

Frustrated with agency reticence and the slow progress in fully achieving the goals of the original Act, Congress made historic advancements in tribal governance by amending the Act to address the agency inflexibility and provide additional authority to Indian tribes. See Pub. L. 100-472 and Pub. L. 102-184.

These amendments were first directed at the BIA programs. Public Law 100-472 established tribal self-governance demonstration projects whereby participating Indian tribes could administer a wider swath of BIA programs through compacts, a mechanism more reflective of the government-to-government relationship.

Through these compacts, Indian tribes could redesign programs and reallocate funds among the different programs they operated to meet their local needs. In addition, Indian tribes were authorized to transfer their tribal shares of the BIA budget to their tribal programs.

That is, “funding for the annual agreements [were] allocated out of agency, area and central office accounts of the BIA to a tribe on the basis of what that tribe would have received in funds and services in the absence of the agreement.” S. Rpt. 103-205, at 3.

In 1994, Congress amended the Act to make the self-governance demonstration project permanent within the Department of Interior. See Pub. L. 103-413.

Pub. L. 102-184 authorized a study to determine the feasibility of extending the BIA demonstration project to the IHS programs, functions and services. This demonstration project was ultimately made permanent by Pub. L. 106-260.

Throughout this series of amendments, Congress has reaffirmed the viability of self-governance and expanded tribal authority over Indian programs throughout the primary agencies responsible for Indian affairs—the BIA and IHS. Translating these successes to other programs beyond the BIA and IHS became the next evolution in tribal self-governance.

In 1994, Congress authorized compacting of Department of Interior programs beyond those administered by the BIA. See Pub. L. 103-413. In 2000, Congress directed the Secretary of DHHS to conduct a feasibility study of a tribal demonstration project for DHHS programs beyond those administered by the IHS. See Pub. L. 106-260.

On March 12, 2003, the Secretary of DHHS delivered the final report on the feasibility study to the Committee.¹ In developing this study, the DHHS consulted with several stakeholders—such as state and local government organizations and other health and human service professional associations—in addition to Indian tribes. The study made several recommendations which have been largely incorporated into S. 1696.

B. Essential Components of Tribal Self-Governance

As evidenced by the series of amendments to the Act, the Federal self-governance policy continues to evolve and expand. The Act and amendments made to it have included several consistent components such as: (1) streamlining bureaucracy; (2) increasing program flexibility; and (3) maximizing Indian tribal involvement in decision-making.

The amendments to the Act made clear that streamlining the bureaucracy is an integral part of Indian self-determination policy. The savings incurred from reducing administrative costs is critical to increasing aggregate funding for tribal health programs—particularly in times of underfunding.

According to a 1998 National Indian Health Board Report² (the “NIHB Report”), Indian tribes experience substantial savings from compacting. For example, one tribal health program operating under a self-governance compact reduced its cost of nursing supplies from $200,000 to $60,000 per year by effectively negotiating discount contracts and instituting case management.³

In testimony before the Committee on S. 1696, Indian tribes indicated that additional savings could be achieved through expanding self-governance to other DHHS programs, and documentation identifying such savings is attached to this report.

The tribal documentation demonstrates cost savings achieved from reducing administrative burdens. For example, the Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe administers 3 of the grant programs identified in S. 1696 with a total funding stream of $247,500. The projected savings achieved by incorporating those programs into a self-governance compact were $7,250 and 132 hours of staff time per year. Likewise, the Choctaw Nation projected $43,560 in cost savings with reductions of nearly 2,000 hours of staff time spent on administrative duties.

The amendments to the Act also reflected substantial flexibility for Indian tribes to operate programs through the redesign and re-allocation functions. This flexibility has been of significant benefit to Indian tribes in meeting local health needs. No longer would Indian tribes have to return time and again to the Secretary for approval when developing programs within their compacts that are responsive to community needs.

The NIHB Report noted that population growth, inflation, health care financing, and IHS reorganization were factors which “may stimulate more tribes to choose the increased flexibility of compacting. The flexibility and control over local health resources may be necessary for tribes to respond to the accelerating pace of change in the Indian Health Service and the general health care environment.” NIHB Report, Vol. II at 73.

These predictions have been proven accurate. Tribal self-governance within the IHS began with approximately six tribes by the end of FY 1993.⁴ As of 2004, according to the IHS, “62 compacts and 82 funding agreements have been negotiated * * * with 287 tribes.” Department of Health and Human Services, Fiscal Year 2005, Indian Health Service, Justification of Estimates for Appropriations Committees (“Justification”), at Supp–79.

More tribal involvement in the Indian health care system has also contributed to greater improvements in services to and health care levels of Indian people. NIHB Report, Vol. I at 13. During this evolution, Congress introduced a major tool into Indian health care for increasing tribal involvement in the decision-making process: negotiated rule-making.⁵

The negotiated rule-making required by the 1994 amendments “gave tribes a significant role in the development of federal regulations to implement contract reforms.” NIHB Report, Vol. II at 4. The final regulations developed by this process were issued on June 24, 1996 and revealed that “significantly more of Headquarters and Area Office functions [were] clearly contractible than were thought to be contractible in 1989.” Id. at 28.

This involvement was inherent in the development of the feasibility required by Pub.L. 106–260. The tribal steering group provided technical oversight in developing the study and recommendations. The Committee is pleased with the process implemented and level of tribal involvement in completing the study. The Committee believes that the resulting study and recommendations are much stronger and, accordingly, has largely adopted those recommendations in S. 1696.

SUMMARY OF MAJOR PROVISIONS

A. Policy and Scope

S. 1696 continues the steady march of meaningful tribal control of programs affecting their communities by extending the Act’s compacting provisions to DHHS programs beyond those administered by the IHS. In § 601, several of the definitions in the new Title VI have been carried forward from the current Title V of the Act. The term “Indian tribe” has been clarified to include the entities authorized to administer the included programs on behalf of an Indian tribe.

Section 602 establishes a 5-year demonstration project for up to 50 Indian tribes meeting certain eligibility criteria with an option—at the discretion of the Secretary—to include additional tribes who must all meet the eligibility criteria as required in § 603.

⁴The NIHB Report notes the IHS was authorized to initiate planning activities with 17 tribes that had compacts with the BIA in 1992 and by the last quarter of FY 1993, six tribes had entered compacts. See NIHB Report, Vol. II at 4, 49.

⁵See 5 U.S.C. § 561 et seq.

B. Implementation

Indian tribes have previously raised concerns regarding administrative delays by the Department in implementing statutory changes. The demonstration project proposed in S. 1696 is intended to be implemented immediately upon enactment regardless of whether regulations have been promulgated to govern the project. The limited time frame for the demonstration project necessitates immediate action by the Department.

Several factors exist to expedite implementation. For instance, the universe of potential applicants is already known: only Indian tribes that have compacts as of the date of enactment may be considered for participation.

In addition, a vehicle for implementing the project already exists. Under § 604, these Indian tribes may use their pre-existing compacts for the demonstration project. The use of a pre-existing compact, however, is not grounds for renegotiating that compact. In addition, participation in the demonstration project is not conditioned upon renegotiating compact provisions the Department finds unsatisfactory. Likewise, the pre-existing compact terms governing amendments or renegotiations are not superceded by Title VI.

C. Compact Terms

Sections 604 and 605 outline compact negotiation procedures and other provisions that may be included in these compacts. The duration of the demonstration project compact provisions may not exceed the statutory 5-year duration of the project. However, if an Indian tribe uses its pre-existing compact for the demonstration project, the term of the demonstration project is not to affect the remaining provisions of the compact that are not governed by the demonstration project, unless otherwise agreed to by the parties.

D. Programs

The programs that may be included in the demonstration project are set forth in § 604. The DHHS Final Report on the feasibility study recommended inclusion of eleven programs. However, under S. 1696 the Secretary is given the discretion to identify and include not more than six additional programs each year of the project.

Thus, the particular provisions governing compact negotiations, waivers and other matters are not triggered until the Secretary identifies additional programs suitable for inclusion.

The Committee believes this discretion is particularly important as each year the Secretary will evaluate the costs and benefits of the project. If the Secretary finds costs savings, program improvements or other benefits from the project, the Committee does not wish to preclude additional benefits that could be gained from the inclusion of these other programs.

E. Funding

The Committee believes that Indian tribes should be provided adequate funding to allow them to effectively carry out programs under the demonstration project. The Committee recognizes that several programs identified in this bill have statutorily-defined funding formulas. As set forth in § 605, if an Indian tribe includes a program governed by a specific statutory funding formula, that Indian tribe's program funds will be established by that formula.

Where there is no statutory funding formula or if the statutory funding formula results in underfunding and additional funds are available, § 605 authorizes the Secretary to negotiate with participating Indian tribes for the overall direct program funding amount.

The Committee recognizes that Indian tribes may experience difficulties in meeting the matching fund requirements in various programs. For example, many Indian tribes do not have the requisite economies to support a tax or fee-generating base that states have to enable them to meet the match requirements. Thus under § 605, in reviewing waiver requests for the matching requirements, the Secretary is encouraged to exercise flexibility in interpreting the applicable statutes or regulations.

The Committee also believes that Indian tribes should be authorized to receive contract support costs associated with operating programs included in this project in a manner consistent with principles of tribal self-governance. Payment of these administrative costs is critical to the success of tribal self-governance because these funds assure that an Indian tribe is not obliged to use direct program funds to cover administrative costs, thereby reducing services.

Finally in § 605, the Secretary is authorized to negotiate with Indian tribes for the inclusion of tribal funding shares associated with administrative activities related to an included program. These administrative fund shares are not intended to duplicate contract support costs. The Committee recognizes that the Department conducts a variety of administrative activities, such as training and technical assistance, that may not be reimbursable as contract support or direct program costs. The Committee believes Indian tribes should not be required to divert direct program funding to cover such administrative expenses.

F. Program Requirements

Section 606 authorizes the redesign, consolidation or reallocation of programs or funds to increase flexibility for tribes to meet the needs of their communities while maintaining compliance with applicable statutory and regulatory program and cost standards, such as the Single Audit Act.⁶

In § 606, the Secretary is authorized to waive final regulations according to the standards set forth in § 512(b) of the Act. If the regulations are not waived, then an Indian tribe shall comply with them for the demonstration project.

Section 606 also provides that other rules, policies, guidance and circulars shall not govern the administration of the demonstration project unless agreed to by the Indian tribe in the compact. This manner of administration has proven to be beneficial to Indian tribes already operating compacts by increasing the flexibility in program operations. This provision, however, does not supersede the requirements for the Single Agency Audit Act or other cost principles found in § 506 of the Act.

G. Reports.

Finally in § 607, to ensure that directed progress and improvements are made, the Secretary is to report on an annual basis to ⁶See 31 U.S.C. § 7501 et seq.

Congress on the costs and benefits of the demonstration project. The baseline measurements are to be developed by the Secretary and the participating Indian tribes. Since the reports are due annually, the Committee encourages the Department and the participating Indian tribes to expedite baseline development.

The Committee recognizes that evaluating the results of the demonstration project may give rise to additional costs and has therefore authorized the Secretary to provide additional funding to the Indian tribes. This funding is in addition to the compact costs and may not be used to diminish the compact funding.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

S. 1696 was introduced on October 1, 2003, by Senator Campbell, for himself and Senator Inouye and was referred to the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs.

A hearing on S. 1696 was held on May 19, 2004. Testimony was provided by several Indian tribes. All witnesses expressed support for the bill. The DHHS was invited, but failed to attend. Instead, the Final Report on the feasibility study was reviewed for findings and recommendations by the DHHS. The recommendations have been largely incorporated into the substitute amendment.

Amendments of 2004, Title VI
Response to Request for Information by
Chairman Ben Nighthorse Campbell

During the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs (SCIA) hearing on May 19, 2004, on S. 1696, HHS Tribal Self-Governance Amendments of 2003 (Demonstration Project), Chairman Ben Nighthorse Campbell commented that there have been many references to savings that are attributed to the redesign of reporting requirements by Self-Governance Tribes. The reporting requirements included in S. 1696 are detailed in P.L. 106-260, Title V, Sec. 514, Reports; in S. 1696, Sec. 607.

In response to the Chairman's comments, the Jamestown S'Klallam Tribe and the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma prepared the following analysis.

JAMESTOWN S'KLALLAM TRIBE

Currently, the Jamestown S'Klallam Tribe receives funds from three of the grant programs identified to be included in a "demonstration project" in S. 1696, Title VI:

- Twice per year program report – Elder Program Coordinator – 18 hrs per year
- Twice per year Financial Status Report - CFO – 4 hrs
- Quarterly cash transaction & reconciliation – online process – CFO – 3 hours per year.

Savings and Benefits of Consolidation to the Tribe

Fiscal Office

If funding is available immediately and can be drawn down in a lump sum under Self-Governance, the Fiscal Office time is reduced to annual reconciliation and reporting.

HHS Administration & Staff

Application and Annual Plan Submissions

If consolidation results in a process similar to the IHS and BIA, program planning would be entirely an internal function and eliminate submitting separate plans for each funding source. The internal program planning that we do now would continue but the translation of internal planning to the required federal plan formats would be eliminated. This would save at least 65 hours of staff time per year.

Reporting

Each of the above programs report internally through the existing quarterly report process that is sent to the Tribal Council. Consolidation would eliminate the semi-annual and annual reporting to the 3 funding sources saving about 50 hours of staff time each year.

Time And Cost Savings

Department	Hours Saved per Year	$ Savings
Fiscal	30	$1,500
HHS Admin	65	$3,250
HHS Program Staff	50	$1,500
Reduced federal oversight	10	$1,000
TOTAL	132	$7,250

OTHER POSSIBLE BENEFITS OF CONSOLIDATION

In the past two years, the Tribe has looked at applying for the Child Welfare and Promoting Safe and Stable Families funding under Title IV of the Social Security Act. A formula is used to allocate these funds to Tribes. However the amount available to Jamestown and other small tribes is minimal, our allocation would be less than $8,000. The application process, the development of annual plans, and the scope of services required by acceptance of funds are far beyond what can be accomplished with $8,000. If consolidation eliminated the current application and planning process and allowed the Tribe to decide how to use the $8,000 to support child welfare services, then we would take the funding.

Similarly, we could look at SAMHSA and Mental Health block grant funding if there is an allocation of funds available and if we do not have the administrative burdens of the current application processes. There are opportunities for smaller Tribes to have access to program funds that we can't access now because we do not have the administrative staff time to manage these grants.

CHOCTAW NATION OF OKLAHOMA

The Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma manages 6 DHHS programs that are designated for inclusion in a "demonstration program" in S.1696. The hours listed with each program are those hours spent by staff directly associated with reporting and performing coordination with DHHS.

TOTAL SAVINGS PER YEAR: $43,560

The program and fiscal savings listed above are minor in comparison to program redesign and expansion that would be permitted under this demonstration program.

Response to Request for Information by
Chairman Ben Nighthorse Campbell

The Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, as well as many of the Tribes across the Nation that have compacted under Self-Governance, especially in the Indian Health Service, have structured their programs to meet the needs of their patients.

Reporting is an essential part of being accountable for a program. Tribes in Self-Governance have shown a willingness to participate in the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) and have recently been provided an overview and possible program benefits of the OMB sponsored Program Assessment Rating Tool (PART). However, providing reports for the sake of reporting to a Regional Program Director, who does nothing with the reports, is a disincentive. Self-Governance allows programs to report useful information that affects program outcomes.

The Choctaw Nation is proud of the DHHS programs we manage, but we could have the benefit of so many more choices and opportunities. Self-Governance Tribes will be able to access these choices and opportunities with S. 1696.

* The Choctaw costs for program and fiscal services, functions and activities should be compared to the Federal costs for these programs prior to being operated by the Tribe.

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATION AND TABULATION OF VOTE

In an open business session on June 16, 2004, the Committee considered a substitute amendment proposed by Senator Campbell. By a unanimous vote, the Committee ordered the substitute amendment favorably reported to the full Senate with the recommendation that the bill, as amended, do pass.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1. Short Title

The Act may be cited as the “Department of Health and Human Services Tribal Self-Governance Amendments Act of 2003”.

Section 2. Amendment

Section 2 amends Title VI of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act by striking the Title VI and replacing it with the following:

SEC. 601. DEFINITIONS

Definitions of Title V of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act are made to apply to Title VI.

SEC. 602. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROJECT

Section 602 establishes a 5-year Demonstration Project to demonstrate the effectiveness of tribal administration of non-IHS programs within the DHHS, and would place the management of the Project within the Office of the Secretary.

SEC. 603. SELECTION OF PARTICIPATING INDIAN TRIBES

Section 603 authorizes up to 50 existing self-governance tribes to participate in the Project, and to apply for planning and negotiation grants.

SEC. 604. COMPACTS AND FUNDING AGREEMENTS

Section 604 would require tribes and the Secretary to negotiate special Title VI compacts and Funding Agreements (FA), unless a tribe elects to use its existing Title V compact for this purpose. This section also prescribes guidelines for the contents of a compact and Funding Agreement, identifies thirteen specific DHHS programs eligible for inclusion in a Title VI agreement, and authorizes the Secretary to identify up to six additional programs eligible for the Demonstration Project.

SEC. 605. TRANSFER OF FUNDS

Section 605 requires lump-sum advance funding as is already the case under Title V. The statutory funding formulas would be used to identify tribal funds and, if appropriations are available, an additional amount, as negotiated by the Secretary and tribe, may be provided. Contract support costs would be added under the same rules applicable under Titles I and V, and tribes would be authorized to negotiate for “tribal shares of administrative funds.”

SEC. 606. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 606 would address a number of general issues including authorization to tribes to redesign, consolidate or reallocate within existing statutory limitations, and to secure waivers of “final regulations * * * to facilitate [redesign or reallocation].” Section 606 would also incorporate the “Final Offer” process set forth in Title V, except that appeals would go to the Intra-Departmental Council on Native American Affairs. Section 606 would also incorporate a number of other Title V provisions, including those dealing with the annual audits, cost principles, prompt payment, interest and program income, and carryover of funds.

SEC. 607. REPORT

Section 607 would require an annual Secretarial Report to Congress on the costs and benefits of the Demonstration Project, using baseline measures that have been mutually developed by the Secretary and participating tribes.

SEC. 608. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

Section 608 authorizes appropriations to carry out the title.

COST AND BUDGETARY CONSIDERATIONS

The cost estimate for S. 1696, as evaluated by the Congressional Budget Office, is set forth below:

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, August 11, 2004.

Hon. BEN NIGHORSE CAMPBELL,
Chairman, Committee on Indian Affairs,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for S. 1696, the Department of Health and Human Services Tribal Self-Governance Amendments Act of 2004.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Eric Rollins.

Sincerely,

ELIZABETH M. ROBINSON
(For Douglas Holtz-Eakin, Director).

Enclosure.

S. 1696—Department of Health and Human Services Tribal Self-Governance Amendments Act of 2004

Summary: S. 1696 would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) to conduct a demonstration project to promote tribal self-governance. The project would involve about 50 tribes and would last no more than five years. Participating tribes would manage a number of programs administered by HHS and would have flexibility to reshape those programs to better meet tribal needs. Participating tribes would also receive their funding for those programs in a lump sum. The bill would authorize the appropriation of such sums as necessary to carry out the project.

CBO estimates that implementing S. 1696 would cost $10 million in 2005 and $42 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary funds. Those costs would be borne by the Office of the Secretary in HHS, which would oversee the implementation of the demonstration project. We also estimate that providing funding to participating tribes in a lump sum would accelerate outlays for many of the programs included in the demonstration project. As a result, the bill would increase direct spending by a total of $7 million and spending subject to appropriation by $34 million over the 2005–2009 period. Over the longer 2005–2014 period, the use of lump-sum funding would have no net effect on direct spending and would increase spending subject to appropriation by $2 million.

S. 1696 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA). At their option, tribal governments could participate in a demonstration project that would grant them greater authority for governing and administering a variety of programs.

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of S. 1696 is shown in Table 1. The costs of this legislation fall within budget functions 500 (education, employment, training, and social services), 550 (health), and 600 (income security). For this estimate, CBO assumes that S. 1696 will be enacted by the end of 2004.

Basis of estimate: The Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (ISDEAA) allows Indian tribes to directly manage programs that had previously been administered on their behalf by the Indian Health Service (IHS). Tribes that do so have considerable flexibility to reshape those programs to better meet tribal needs.

S. 1696 would amend ISDEAA to authorize a demonstration project that would give participating tribes the same flexibility in managing certain other HHS programs. The bill specifies 13 programs that would be included in the project and allows the Secretary to add up to six programs annually in later years. Each participating tribe would decide which of those programs to include in the project. Under current law, tribes can administer most of those programs themselves, but must follow existing program rules.

The bill would target participation in the demonstration project to 50 tribes, although the Secretary could allow a higher number to take part if tribal interest were high. Only tribes that already manage IHS-funded programs would be eligible. As with IHS programs, participating tribes would have the option of receiving their annual funding for the project in a lump sum. The demonstration project would last for no more than five years after the enactment of the bill.

For this estimate, CBO assumed that about 50 tribes would participate in the demonstration project, and that each tribe would manage about half of the eligible programs. We assumed that the Secretary would not make any additional programs eligible for the project. CBO estimated funding amounts for participating tribes based on historical averages, and assumed that tribes would opt to receive their funding in a lump sum.

Direct Spending

Tribes currently receive funding for most of the programs in the demonstration project on an as-needed basis rather than in a lump sum. As a result, the shift to lump-sum funding under the bill would accelerate outlays for those programs. CBO estimates that the bill would increase spending for the four mandatory programs in the demonstration project—Child Care and Development Fund, Native Employment Works, Promoting Safe and Stable Families, and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families—by a total of $7 million over the 2005–2009 period. Those increases would be offset by lower spending in later years, and the bill would have no net effect on direct spending over the 2005–2014 period.

Spending Subject to Appropriation

The estimated effects of S. 1696 on spending subject to appropriation are shown in Table 2.

Effect of Lump-Sum Funding. CBO estimates that the use of lump-sum funding under the bill would increase outlays for the programs in the demonstration project that are funded through annual appropriations—Child Care and Development Fund, Child Welfare Services, Family Violence Prevention Grants, Grants to Native Americans, Head Start, Promoting Safe and Stable Families, and Targeted Capacity Expansion—by a total of $34 million over the 2005–2009 period. Those increases would be largely offset by lower spending in later years, with the bill increasing costs by $2 million over the 2005–2014 period.

Startup Costs. Indian tribes that wish to participate in the demonstration project would incur one-time costs for planning and preparation activities. Both IHS and the Bureau of Indian Affairs—where tribal management of programs is also common—have given tribes grants to offset these costs. Based on the experience of IHS, CBO assumes that HHS would issue grants averaging $70,000 to each participating tribe, for a total cost of $3.5 million in 2005.

Project Management. According to HHS, the costs of administering the demonstration project would include a project office to oversee the demonstration, annual negotiations with participating tribes, a legal staff to review tribal agreements, and regular reports on the status of the project. Based on the experience of IHS, CBO estimates that those costs would total about $4 million annually.

Contract Support Costs. The bill would allow tribes that participate in the demonstration project to receive funding for the administrative costs that they would incur. These costs, commonly known as contract support costs, include facilities, equipment, legal services, and salaries. Although all of the programs in the demonstration project include some funding for administrative costs, IHS experience with tribal management suggests that those amounts would not be sufficient for many tribes. Based on information from HHS, CBO estimates that the cost of the additional administrative costs for participating tribes would total $2 million in 2005 and $18 million over the 2005–2009 period. Costs in 2005 would be lower because tribes would not operate the demonstration project for the entire year.

Intergovernmental and private-sector impact: S. 1696 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA. At their option, tribal governments could participate in a demonstration project that would grant them greater authority for governing and administering a variety of programs.

Estimate prepared by: Federal Costs: Eric Rollins. Impact on State, Local, and Tribal Governments: Leo Lex. Impact on the Private Sector: Crystal Taylor.

Estimate approved by: Peter H. Fontaine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.
